Hongkong, July 11TH, 1888.

Ar the Police Court yesterday a case was disposed of by Mr. SERCOMBE SMITH in which a grave injustice appears to have been done to the convicted party. A gentleman named Mr. Ports had employed a street chair to carry him on Sunday evening. The following day the house porter informed bim that the coolies had come for their cording to his evidence, a $10 note to the them, but the porter says he did not understand what was said about change. The porter took the note and, if he is to be believed, gave it to one of the coolies, being under the impression that it was a $1 note. Mr. Ports subsequantly asked for the $9 change, when the of application. The highest tender was Rs. mistake, as we will call it, was discovered, 99.12.7. Mr. Descon-Well, my Lord, I can only submit that he substantially complied with the requirements of the sections. His Lordship-You see there was no notice that an appeal had been made. The letter of the 26th May only threatens an appeal Mr. Deacon—The letter states positively, my Lord, that he is going to appeal. It is not in any way problematical or doubtful Mr. Johnson said the Ordinance was quite clear. It gave the jurisdiction under which the appeals were to be made, and he thought it dosirable in practice that the requirements of these sections should be strictly adhered to. The Ordinance required that a notice of appeal stating fully the grounds on which the appeal was made should be served on the assessor. That had not been done. There was the correspondence previous to the appeal being made stating the grounds of dissatisfaction, and there was the last letter, in which the appellant said, as you insist on so and so we intend to appeal. That could not be said to be a notice of appeal. Therewas nothing to show that afterwards he might not have changed his mind on the matter. After the appeal has been made the assessor must receive a notice stating the grounds of appeal. A notice previous to that was of no use. notice after the appeal was made was binding on the appellant, and thus the assessor knew what objections he had to meet. As it was the apnellant did not really know what were the grounds for appeal in this case. In the other case which was before his Lordship last time and which had since been withdrawn the appellants went much further than in this case. Although no direct notice was served on the assessor a note was written which though not a copy was to the same effect as that in which the appeal was made. If that case had come before his Lordship he (Mr. Johnson) could not have said although there had not been strict compliance with the Ordinance. His Lordship said that as far as he could see he thought the want of notice must be fatal t this appeal. The matter had been fully disoussed in a previous case, which he had looked up, in which there had been a failure to give notice and the court held that the appeal must be set aside on that technical ground. As he had said before, he did not like to dismiss a case on a mere technicality when the requirements of the Ordinance had been substantially complied with, but he did not see how this section could be got over. No real notice of appeal had been given. Appellant in his letter of the 26th stated that he stated in a former letter. Here he stated that that they did not know the grounds of appeal; that have changed his mind and not have appealed at all. On the ground therefore that the officer and outting him into quarters. conditions of the Ordinance have not been complied with he must dismiss this appeal. Mr. Johnson-Will your Lordship make any order as to costs. His Lordship-Costs will follow the event.

" None whatever." She went away to attend on a patient. I retired to my bedroom, and opened my diary. Again and again, I read that remarkable story of the intended poisoning, and of the manner in which it had ended. I sat thinking over this remance in real life, till I was interrupted by the announcement

Mr. Philip Dunboyne had returned. In Miss Jillgall's absence we were alone at the table. My appetite was gone. I made a pretence of eating, and another pretence of being glad to see my devoted lover. I talked to him in the prettiest manner. As a hypocrite, he thoroughly matched me: he was gallant, he was amusing.
